Sole source letter: ConductCognition

To the purchasing office:

ConductCognition is built and run by ConductScience. ConductScience, Inc. is the only developer of the ConductCognition software, and ConductScience, Inc. issues every license for it.

ConductCognition combines the following in one platform.

- Each published version is a fixed record of the protocol given to participants.
- Published versions cannot be changed, and participants already assigned to a version keep it when a later version is published.
- For each study, ConductCognition writes the text an IRB application asks about the platform, from the study's own tests, visits and consent.
- Tests in the library carry an evidence grade drawn from the published research that uses them.
- Every study exports as CSV files with a codebook.
- Each deletion of study data leaves a record of the study, who deleted it, when and how many records were removed.

ConductCognition is for research use only: its scores are research measures, not medical results. It is not FDA-cleared and it is not 21 CFR Part 11 compliant.
